Application conversion without pressuring unsuitable customers

Team,

Before this becomes another standing report, can we answer the real question?

Loan Products wants to understand application drop-off, decline reasons, booked loans and early repayment stress as one journey. The possible stories are that documentation friction drives drop-off, that affordability declines are concentrated by product, or that some high-conversion channels create weaker early outcomes.

We looked at a version of this before. For the September 2020 review, please show what changed and whether the earlier conclusion still holds. Different teams have produced different answers from the same period, so population and timing rules need to be visible.

Please prepare a Power BI page with drill-through to a reproducible case list. The output must help us decide which application step, policy explanation or channel process should change.

Data available: the latest closed loan files available by the request date, including affordability, pricing and origination risk fields; monthly customer and KYC snapshots; customer contacts, complaints and suggestions; collections cases, promises to pay and recovery payments.

Please state the limitation plainly: Do not optimise approval rate without affordability, conduct and later-outcome controls.

Thanks
