The fee question is about behaviour after the charge - 2024 control review

Hi team,

Pricing needs to understand whether fee complaints reflect affordability, unclear value, service failure or a genuinely poor price point.

This has returned because the previous answer was useful but not strong enough to become a standing rule. Use May 2024 as the new evidence point rather than recycling the earlier conclusion. The discussion is currently being driven by anecdotes, and the teams involved are describing the same customers differently.

Can you test these explanations rather than choosing one at the start?
- complaints cluster after specific charges
- fee reversals treat symptoms without fixing the journey
- high-use customers tolerate fees when service works

The decision is which fee, wording, waiver or product design should be tested. Please give us a model-ready table, data dictionary and an honest baseline.

You should be able to build the evidence from monthly account snapshots, status events, limits, product enrolments and signatories; transaction-level timestamps, channels, amounts, statuses and error context; customer contacts, complaints and suggestions. The data supports charges and behaviour, not a complete fee-income or cost-to-serve calculation.

Thanks
