

Outlook

From	kabelo.radebe@executive.office.keystonebank.co.za
To	analytics.retail@keystonebank.co.za
Cc	product.fintech@keystonebank.co.za, pricing.customer.value@keystonebank.co.za
Sent	Mon, 18 Nov 2019 16:30:00 -0000

Which customers actually treat Keystone as their main bank?

Hi all,

I may be joining dots that do not belong together, so please challenge the premise.

The board keeps using active accounts as a proxy for customer primacy, and that assumption needs to be challenged. The discussion is currently being driven by anecdotes, and the teams involved are describing the same customers differently.

Could the answer be that fee or service friction precedes the drop in activity? Or are we actually seeing that customers keep the account open but move useful activity elsewhere? I also do not want us to miss the possibility that regular inflows and recurring payments indicate a primary relationship.

The practical decision is how Keystone should define a primary customer and which customers need service recovery rather than marketing. Please send a working Excel file with the exception population and clear columns; I need the exceptions and counter-examples, not only an average.

Work from monthly account snapshots, status events, limits, product enrolments and signatories; transaction-level timestamps, channels, amounts, statuses and error context; debit-order mandates, collection dates, suspensions and cancellations; customer contacts, complaints and suggestions. Use transaction behaviour as a proxy. Do not claim to observe activity held at another bank.

Regards