The fee question is about behaviour after the charge

Hi team,

Pricing needs to understand whether fee complaints reflect affordability, unclear value, service failure or a genuinely poor price point.

We looked at a version of this before. For the June 2020 review, please show what changed and whether the earlier conclusion still holds. Different teams have produced different answers from the same period, so population and timing rules need to be visible.

Can you test these explanations rather than choosing one at the start?

- high-use customers tolerate fees when service works
- complaints cluster after specific charges
- fee reversals treat symptoms without fixing the journey

The decision is which fee, wording, waiver or product design should be tested. Please give us a one-page finding note plus the underlying CSV for our own review.

You should be able to build the evidence from monthly account snapshots, status events, limits, product enrolments and signatories; transaction-level timestamps, channels, amounts, statuses and error context; customer contacts, complaints and suggestions. The data supports charges and behaviour, not a complete fee-income or cost-to-serve calculation.

Thanks
