Follow-up: please build the evidence before anyone drafts the response

Hi all,

I may be joining dots that do not belong together, so please challenge the premise.

A customer dispute cannot be assessed from the complaint text alone because authorisation, posting, reversal and contact dates differ. The operating teams agree that more journeys are failing; they disagree on whether the customer, the bank or a downstream party owns the failure. There are enough data exceptions to make a polished average dangerous; preserve the unresolved cases.

Could the answer be that the complaint outcome does not match the underlying evidence? Or are we actually seeing that the customer saw a temporary posting as final? I also do not want us to miss the possibility that a bank-side delay caused the loss.

This has returned because the previous answer was useful but not strong enough to become a standing rule. Use July 2022 as the new evidence point rather than recycling the earlier conclusion. The practical decision is the evidence position and whether remediation should precede correspondence. Please send a one-page finding note plus the underlying CSV for our own review; I need the exceptions and counter-examples, not only an average.

Work from transaction-level timestamps, channels, amounts, statuses and error context; customer contacts, complaints and suggestions; ATM attempts, host responses, PIN attempts, blocked-card state and latency. Use statements only where they exist and do not invent merchant evidence or call recordings.

Regards
