Follow-up: application conversion without pressuring unsuitable customers

Hi team,

Loan Products wants to understand application drop-off, decline reasons, booked loans and early repayment stress as one journey.

This has returned because the previous answer was useful but not strong enough to become a standing rule. Use September 2023 as the new evidence point rather than recycling the earlier conclusion. There is no confirmed problem yet; this is a request to test an assumption before it becomes policy.

Can you test these explanations rather than choosing one at the start?

- some high-conversion channels create weaker early outcomes
- affordability declines are concentrated by product
- documentation friction drives drop-off

The decision is which application step, policy explanation or channel process should change. Please give us a working Excel file with the exception population and clear columns.

You should be able to build the evidence from the latest closed loan files available by the request date, including affordability, pricing and origination risk fields; monthly customer and KYC snapshots; customer contacts, complaints and suggestions; collections cases, promises to pay and recovery payments. Do not optimise approval rate without affordability, conduct and later-outcome controls.

Thanks
