Follow-up: the growth number needs a quality check

Hi team,

The headline activity story is positive, but EXCO cannot tell whether it reflects durable customer relationships or short-lived transaction volume.

This has returned because the previous answer was useful but not strong enough to become a standing rule. Use March 2024 as the new evidence point rather than recycling the earlier conclusion. Failure anecdotes are beginning to drive decisions, although retries and late posting may be making the problem look larger than the affected-customer population. There are enough data exceptions to make a polished average dangerous; preserve the unresolved cases.

Can you test these explanations rather than choosing one at the start?

- activity is concentrated in a small set of customers
- service failures are creating volume without creating value
- new accounts are becoming primary relationships

The decision is where to invest and which headline measure should be retired from the management pack. Please give us a short decision pack with no more than five slides and an attached evidence table.

You should be able to build the evidence from monthly account snapshots, status events, limits, product enrolments and signatories; transaction-level timestamps, channels, amounts, statuses and error context; customer contacts, complaints and suggestions; campaign design and customer responses. Do not describe account activity as profitability; the data does not contain a full revenue and cost allocation.

Thanks
