Quick question: which branches open accounts that customers actually use?

Team,

Before this becomes another standing report, can we answer the real question?

Branch Network wants to separate productive onboarding from accounts that never progress beyond opening and initial deposit. The possible stories are that first useful activity varies by branch, that card or online activation friction delays use, or that some customer types need assisted follow-up.

The discussion is currently being driven by anecdotes, and the teams involved are describing the same customers differently.

Please prepare a one-page finding note plus the underlying CSV for our own review. The output must help us decide where branch coaching or onboarding process changes are needed.

Data available: monthly customer and KYC snapshots; monthly account snapshots, status events, limits, product enrolments and signatories; available initial-deposit records up to the request date; transaction-level timestamps, channels, amounts, statuses and error context; ATM attempts, host responses, PIN attempts, blocked-card state and latency.

Please state the limitation plainly: Do not rank branches on raw volume without controlling for opening month, customer mix and account type.

Thanks
