Which loan vintages are seasoning badly?

Team,

Before this becomes another standing report, can we answer the real question?

Portfolio risk is being discussed as a single book, although origination periods experienced different rates, channels and customer conditions. The possible stories are that operational debit failures contaminate credit outcomes, that product mix creates the apparent vintage effect, or that recent vintages deteriorate faster.

Please start with the decision we need to make, then show whether the available evidence is strong enough to support it.

Please prepare a control view with the exceptions, owner and reason each item was included. The output must help us decide which vintage needs deeper review and whether policy or operations owns the next action.

Data available: the latest closed loan files available by the request date, including affordability, pricing and origination risk fields; collections cases, promises to pay and recovery payments; debit-order mandates, collection dates, suspensions and cancellations; transaction-level timestamps, channels, amounts, statuses and error context; time-appropriate news and macro-event context.

Please state the limitation plainly: Macro events provide context, not a causal estimate by themselves.

Thanks
