Follow-up: do the decline reasons agree with the recorded application?

Hi all,

I may be joining dots that do not belong together, so please challenge the premise.

Credit Risk needs to know whether recorded decline reasons are consistent with affordability, documentation and workflow evidence. Several teams are reporting more failed or retried activity than they expected, but they do not agree on the cause.

Could the answer be that decline codes align with application facts? Or are we actually seeing that channel differences indicate process inconsistency? I also do not want us to miss the possibility that generic reasons are masking multiple causes.

This has returned because the previous answer was useful but not strong enough to become a standing rule. Use September 2021 as the new evidence point rather than recycling the earlier conclusion. The practical decision is which policy rules, reason codes or quality checks need revision. Please send a working Excel file with the exception population and clear columns; I need the exceptions and counter-examples, not only an average.

Work from the latest closed loan files available by the request date, including affordability, pricing and origination risk fields; monthly customer and KYC snapshots; monthly account snapshots, status events, limits, product enrolments and signatories. The separate rejected-account file and loan decisions represent different processes; do not merge them without a defined key and business rule.

Regards
