Follow-up: application conversion without pressuring unsuitable customers

Team,

Before this becomes another standing report, can we answer the real question?

Loan Products wants to understand application drop-off, decline reasons, booked loans and early repayment stress as one journey. The possible stories are that documentation friction drives drop-off, that some high-conversion channels create weaker early outcomes, or that affordability declines are concentrated by product.

This has returned because the previous answer was useful but not strong enough to become a standing rule. Use February 2022 as the new evidence point rather than recycling the earlier conclusion. The operating teams agree that more journeys are failing; they disagree on whether the customer, the bank or a downstream party owns the failure. The first extracts did not reconcile, which means source precedence and exclusions must be part of the answer.

Please prepare a Power BI page with drill-through to a reproducible case list. The output must help us decide which application step, policy explanation or channel process should change.

Data available: the latest closed loan files available by the request date, including affordability, pricing and origination risk fields; monthly customer and KYC snapshots; customer contacts, complaints and suggestions; collections cases, promises to pay and recovery payments.

Please state the limitation plainly: Do not optimise approval rate without affordability, conduct and later-outcome controls.

Thanks
