Resolved in the system, but resolved for the customer? - 2023 control review

Hi team,

Complaint status alone may overstate resolution when the same customer returns, the transaction remains unresolved or the account closes.

This has returned because the previous answer was useful but not strong enough to become a standing rule. Use May 2023 as the new evidence point rather than recycling the earlier conclusion. Failure anecdotes are beginning to drive decisions, although retries and late posting may be making the problem look larger than the affected-customer population. The first extracts did not reconcile, which means source precedence and exclusions must be part of the answer.

Can you test these explanations rather than choosing one at the start?

- resolved complaints do not recur
- specific categories lead to repeat contact or attrition
- resolution notes are generic

The decision is which complaint outcomes need quality review and which root causes need fixing. Please give us a model-ready table, data dictionary and an honest baseline.

You should be able to build the evidence from customer contacts, complaints and suggestions; transaction-level timestamps, channels, amounts, statuses and error context; monthly account snapshots, status events, limits, product enrolments and signatories. The analysis can identify recurrence and later behaviour, not customer satisfaction that was never recorded.

Thanks
