Follow-up: please hold back a control group before launch

Team,

Before this becomes another standing report, can we answer the real question?

Analytics has been asked to report campaign success, but selected customers may already have been more likely to convert. The possible stories are that the campaign creates incremental response, that service problems suppress otherwise suitable offers, or that targeting explains the apparent lift.

This has returned because the previous answer was useful but not strong enough to become a standing rule. Use June 2023 as the new evidence point rather than recycling the earlier conclusion. The operating teams agree that more journeys are failing; they disagree on whether the customer, the bank or a downstream party owns the failure.

Please prepare a model-ready table, data dictionary and an honest baseline. The output must help us decide the treatment, control, success window and guardrail measures before the next campaign launches.

Data available: campaign design and customer responses; monthly account snapshots, status events, limits, product enrolments and signatories; transaction-level timestamps, channels, amounts, statuses and error context; customer contacts, complaints and suggestions.

Please state the limitation plainly: Historical campaign responses alone do not identify causal impact where no comparable control group exists.

Thanks
