A closed complaint may still be an open journey - 2024 control review

Team,

Before this becomes another standing report, can we answer the real question?

Complaint status alone may overstate resolution when the same customer returns, the transaction remains unresolved or the account closes. The possible stories are that resolved complaints do not recur, that specific categories lead to repeat contact or attrition, or that resolution notes are generic.

This has returned because the previous answer was useful but not strong enough to become a standing rule. Use November 2024 as the new evidence point rather than recycling the earlier conclusion. Please start with the decision we need to make, then show whether the available evidence is strong enough to support it.

Please prepare a Power BI page with drill-through to a reproducible case list. The output must help us decide which complaint outcomes need quality review and which root causes need fixing.

Data available: customer contacts, complaints and suggestions; transaction-level timestamps, channels, amounts, statuses and error context; monthly account snapshots, status events, limits, product enrolments and signatories.

Please state the limitation plainly: The analysis can identify recurrence and later behaviour, not customer satisfaction that was never recorded.

Thanks
